Alaska’s Fiscal Future – Events in 2019 and 2020

Alaska Common Ground has continued to hold events discussing Alaska’s Fiscal Future. Please scroll down to find information and video from our last three events.

From Conflict to Compromise: Four debates on Alaska’s fiscal options

As projected deficits mount and savings are spent, Alaskans increasingly consider four options to balance the budget. On February 11, we held an event with four mini-debates on the following fiscal options, and started the event with a program statement from ACG board members Cliff Groh and Drew Cason. You can find their presentation slides here.

What kind of Alaska do we want?
Tuesday, December 10, 2019

Following up on our forum in January, The Costs of Alaska’s Economic Roller Coaster (scroll down for video and information on that program), this event included Senator Natasha von Imhof, Co-Chair of the Senate Finance Committee, who has quantified the problem, as well as Mayor Ethan Berkowitz and a panel of experts providing their vision of a desirable fiscal future for Alaska and how they think we can get there. You can read a summary of the event and discussion here.

A Senator’s View of Fiscal Choices and Opportunities

- Senator Natasha von Imhof, Co-Chair, Senate Finance Committee – Presentation Slides

Other Experts Weigh in:
We’ve been here before. Petroleum revenues have benefitted Alaska greatly, but these revenues are highly volatile and largely at the whim of global forces beyond state control. Alaska Common Ground recognizes that to achieve a strong and stable economy our state will need an ongoing income stream large enough to pay for essential state governmental services.
This event will examine the costs of a start-and-stop economy and the benefits of a stable source of state income.
